Sun protection is more than just avoiding sunburn—it's about keeping your skin healthy and feeling good all summer long. Here are some ways to protect yourself.

1. Use sunscreen(防晒霜) properly

Apply sunscreen with SPF 30 or higher 20–30 minutes before going outside. Don't forget to reapply every two hours, especially after swimming or sweating. Studies show that most people apply too little sunscreen, so using enough (about 1 teaspoon for the face) is key.

2. Wear the right clothes

Wear long sleeves, hats, and UV-protective sunglasses. Dark-colored clothes with tight weaves block more UV rays than light ones. A good pair of sunglasses not only protects your eyes but also prevents fine lines around the eyes caused by squinting(眯眼).

3. Seek shade during peak hours

The sun is strongest from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Use natural shade from trees or create your own shade with umbrellas or tents.

4. Drink enough water

Drinking plenty of water is important for skin health and overall comfort. When you sweat, your body loses water and salt, so drink lots of water even if you're not thirsty. You can also enjoy drinks like tea or fruit juice.

By following these steps, you'll reduce the risk of skin damage. Then you can enjoy being outside without worry. Remember: healthy skin means feeling good!

16. Sun protection can not only prevent sunburn but make us _____.

- A. avoid sweating
- B. look young
- C. prevent allergies
- D. feel good

17. What should you do to keep skin healthy during hot weather?

- A. Wear light-colored clothes.
- B. Drink lots of water.
- C. Avoid using sunglasses.
- D. Apply sunscreen once a day.

18. This article is most likely taken from which section of a magazine?

- A. Health.
- B. Sports.
- C. Science.
- D. Travel.

B

It was very dark outside. I heated the food in the kitchen again, but my dad still didn't come back from the forest. He worked as a forest ranger (护林员). In the morning, he told me he would go to check the new small trees and that I didn't need to wait for him for dinner. But now, the wind was blowing hard and making a loud noise, like an animal. I stood at the door and called him, but he didn't answer.

"I can't wait any longer," I thought. I took a flashlight from the corner and went out. The light showed me the way, but the shadows of the trees looked scary, like claws. I held the flashlight more tightly. I was worried that Dad might be lost or in trouble, so I walked into the forest slowly.

The wind blew harder, and the leaves made noise. I was scared and kept looking back, but I saw nothing. The flashlight was dying. Just then, I heard someone shout, "Xiaoyu? Is that you?"

It was Dad! I shouted, "Dad! I'm here!" I saw the light move, and then I saw his orange ranger clothes. I ran to him and jumped into his arms. I could smell the pine on him, and I almost cried. "Son, why are you here?" Dad asked. Dad's hands were cold, but he hugged me hard. "My phone stopped working. I was on my way home." I put my face against his coat. Listening to his heartbeat, I felt safe again.

19. Why did the writer go into the forest with a flashlight at night?

A. To look for the newly planted trees.

B. To search for his dad.

C. To check the forest as a ranger.

D. To find his lost phone.

20. What is the correct order of the writer's experience?

① He heard his father's call.

② He took a flashlight and entered the forest.

③ He felt scared but kept moving forward.

④ He ran to his father and hugged him.

A. ①②③④

B. ②①④③

C. ②③①④

D. ③②①④

21. How did the writer most probably feel when he saw his father?

A. Angry.

B. Excited.

C. Afraid.

D. Sad.

22. What can we learn from the passage?

A. He loved his father deeply.

B. He often got lost in the forest.

C. He disliked his father's job.

D. His father didn't care about his safety.

C

① Life is full of moments, but some are “special” and stay in our hearts forever. For example, the first time you rode a bike alone, a friend's hug when you were sad, or in evening talking with family. These moments aren't always big, but they change how we feel about ourselves and the world.

② Special moments are like treasures. We don't need to write them down—our hearts remember them. A teacher might praise a shy student's drawing, making the child feel important. A parent could bake cookies with you on a rainy day, filling the kitchen with laughter. Even strangers can create them: a barista who knows your coffee order, or neighbor who helps carry groceries. These small acts stay in our minds because they make us feel loved.

③ Businesses also use special moments. A café might play soft music and serve warm cookies on cold days to make customers feel welcome. A bookstore could hold story time for kids every weekend, turning a visit into a happy memory. An ice-cream shop lets customers decorate their own cones(冰激凌桶)—seeing a child smile while adding something is a moment everyone remembers.

④ In the end, special moments are everywhere. They don't need money or planning—just a little care. A kind word, a smile, or a small surprise can make life richer. So take time to enjoy these moments—they make life worth living.

23. What does the passage say about special moments?

- A. They are always big and exciting.
- B. We can keep the special things in mind.
- C. We need to write them down to remember.
- D. They have nothing to do with how we feel.

24. What does the ice-cream shop probably do according to the passage?

- A. Sells the cheapest ice-cream.
- B. Closes early on weekends.
- C. Refuses to let kids enter.
- D. Creates ice-cream moments for guests.

25. Which is the structure of this passage?

26. What is the passage mainly about?

- A. How to use the power of the moment.
- B. Why people forget small moments.
- C. When to plan big and exciting events.
- D. Where to find the most expensive treasures.

D

Plains wanderers are small, rare birds that live in grasslands. Unlike most birds, female plains wanderers are larger and stronger than males. Females take the lead in protecting their nests and babies from animals like foxes, while males often sit on the eggs to keep them warm. These birds are hard to find because their feathers blend into the grass, making them look like part of the landscape. Sadly, their numbers have been dropping because people are taking over their grassland homes for farms and cities.

To save them, scientists are using AI. The key is the birds' calls. Mother wanderers make soft sounds to talk to their chicks and warn about danger. These calls are quiet and easy to miss, but AI can hear them clearly. Scientists put microphones in the grasslands to record sounds all day and night. Then they put these recordings into a computer program. The AI learns to tell the wanderers' calls apart from other noises, like the wind blowing or insects chirping. This helps scientists find where the mother birds are and how many chicks they have.

"AI helps us monitor these birds without bothering them," says Dr. Lee, who leads the project. "We can find the most important areas for them and work to protect those places." Once, the AI helped scientists find a hidden nest with three baby birds. Without AI, they might not have found it. Thanks to this technology, there is new hope for these rare birds, showing that AI can be a powerful tool in saving wildlife.

27. What do we know about plains wanderers?

- A. Males are larger than females.
- B. They are easy to find in grasslands.
- C. Mother birds are bigger and protect babies.
- D. They are common in many habitats.

28. The underlined word "monitor" in the last paragraph probably means "_____".

- A. see
- B. catch
- C. feed
- D. follow

29. How do scientists use AI to find plains wanderers?

- A. By taking photos of their nests.
- B. By tracking their flying paths.
- C. By counting eggs in the grass.
- D. By analyzing calls from mother birds.

30. What is the passage mainly about?

- A. Why plains wanderers are rare.
- B. How mother wanderers protect their chicks.
- C. What AI can do in daily life.
- D. How scientists use AI to protect plains wanderers.

It felt like a dream come true to Arman from Kazakhstan(哈萨克斯坦). He was the 66 (win) of the Kazakhstan National Chinese Language Contest, and when his sister 67 (return) home from her university study abroad, she was surprised to see his gold medal on the wall. She had always encouraged Arman, but even she didn't expect such a great achievement.

Rewinding(倒带) to a year ago, Arman became 68 (great) interested in the Chinese culture after watching a thrilling kung fu movie. The beautiful language and rich history fascinated him, so he started learning basic phrases online. Soon, he decided 69 (take) part in the annual Chinese competition at school, hoping to challenge himself. But the path wasn't easy. At first, he wasn't chosen for the school team because his pronunciation was weak. 70, he didn't give up. He believed in 71 (he) and practiced every day after classes, repeating words until they sounded perfect.

72 the help of his sister, who had studied Chinese herself, he improved rapidly. She spent hours tutoring him, sharing her textbooks, and even cooking dumplings while they reviewed vocabulary. Her support was invaluable. Finally, after months of hard work, he won 73 ten-day free trip to Beijing as the top prize.

74 excited it is to explore the Great Wall and speak with locals!

As Chinese is becoming 75 (popular) than many other languages globally, his experience shows that perseverance pays off. For any student facing doubts, remember: start small, seek help, and never stop believing. Learning Chinese opened doors to new friendships and opportunities, and it can for you too!
